WHAT BANKING WENT THROUGH

By JOHN H. PUELICHER
American Bankers Association

BANKING in its long career has been compelled to withstand many serious shocks, but it ran into the most perplexing entanglement of its whole history since the general breakdown of values in 1929. The commercial structure of the entire world seemed to have been shaken from its foundations and the marvel is that the banker, with everything breaking down all around him, was able to come through as he has.

J. H. PUELICHER

General business failures, agricultural stagnation, income losses, capital losses, inabilities to meet debts and therefore inabilities of bankers to pay back depositors when loans were not paid, were the reasons, in most instances, for the bank failures.

No profession, no department of life is without its weaker elements, but had proper consideration been given to the relatively few instances in banking, bad exaggerated and startling headlines been kept in true proportion, and banking not been used as a target for political self-seeking and with vote-seeking motives, had unfounded rumors not been spread the people's confidence might have been retained and far less serious would have been their financial losses, for many bank failures were caused that need not have happened.

There were factors in our banking experience which every earnest banker deplores—factors which many had worked years to eliminate, which it was fearfully recognized would aggravate any difficult days which might arise. One of the worst of these was due to political regulation which chartered many banks that should never have been chartered.

That there have been incompetence and dishonesty in banking is admitted. That the instances that did occur were used grossly to increase fear in the public mind, we affirm. We shall continue to strive for higher attainments in our profession and strive for laws that require competence and ability in management. That we cannot legislate honesty and unselfishness into either a banker or a borrower must be conceded, but dishonesty, wherever found, should be punished. It is as true in banking as elsewhere that no matter how good the law, dishonest and incompetent men can make it ineffective. Good laws are essential. We must strive for ever better ones, but their enforcement will come only as the public recognizes that it is a matter not of laws or codes alone but of the men who administer them.

Why Hospitals Use a Liquid Laxative

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. And the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. Do you know the reason?

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can be controlled. It forms no hidden pitfall and not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative brings a perfect movement, and there is no discomfort at the time, or later.

The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated so long as you keep on using it! And the habit-forming irritating salts, or of powerful drugs in the highly concentrated form of pills and tablets may prove injurious.

A week with a properly prepared liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will tell you a lot. A few weeks' time, and your bowels can be "as regular as clockwork." Dr. Caldwell's syrup Pepsin is an approved liquid laxative which all druggists carry ready for use. It makes an ideal family laxative, effective for all ages, and may be given the youngest child. BABY FOODS

"CONSULT your physician" are the three words that we hear most often in the study of baby welfare. So important is this advice that one of New York's most prominent baby specialists has printed on every diet list issued from his office these words: "This diet is for your child at this time, and for no other child at any time."

All of which means that babies are individuals. Mothers have come to recognize this fact, and because there are free clinics as well as expensive baby specialists, babies everywhere are getting their individual rights.

A New Line of Canned Foods

The most favorable indication of this progress in baby welfare is the fact that reliable food manufacturers no longer turn out a product and label it "good for baby" without medical assurance that it is good. "Consult your physician" is the rule of the conscientious food dealer as well as of the conscientious mother. An example of this is the marketing by a well-known manufacturer of good foods, of a new line of baby foods including tomato juice, spinach, carrots, peas, green beans and mixed vegetables. These foods were developed in collaboration with the Mellon Institute of Industrial research and the book describing the foods was written and edited with medical supervision after a thorough examination of the processing of the foods, and they have been granted the seal of acceptance of the American Medical Association.

Because the facts in this booklet are scientifically correct, we are quoting here some of them which will be of interest to mothers:

"If babies are to enjoy health, vigor, even dispositions—and childhood—they need certain body-building foods which contain the various essential vitamins.

"Without vitamin A, resistance to infection diseases is poor. Lacking vitamin B, growth is stunted. Denied vitamin C, scurvy may develop. Furthermore with a partial deficiency of any vitamins malnutrition with less delicate symptoms results. Thus it is of paramount importance that babies diet includes these healthful vitamins.

"As mothers know, these all-important vitamins are found abundantly in certain vegetables, such as spinach, carrots, peas and green beans. Vegetables supply iron greatly needed by the infants. Vegetables are also good sources of calcium and phosphorus, which are the principal bone building materials of bones and teeth. Moreover they are of much assistance in overcoming constipation of infants whose diet is predominately milk.

"Mothers know, too, the hours upon hours of work required to cook these foods properly and to strain the vegetables finely for baby's meals. First vegetables must be carefully selected and washed. Then cooking must be constantly watched. Cooking utensils must be washed. More over time and strength and patience are required in rubbing the vegetables through fine sieves when those foods are prepared at home.

"And fresh vegetables of sufficiently high quality, for babies feeding cannot always be secured all the year round."

Get Medical Advice

The new line of strained vegetables are said to be cooked, strained and packed under ideal conditions that well preserve the essential vitamins and nutritive qualities and they are ready for heating and instant use.

And with all of this care in preparing, this manufacturer who prides himself on his reputation advises mothers to "consult your physician or baby specialist." Ask him the best time to start your baby on vegetables, on the manner of serving them—diluted or undiluted—and as to the length of time to continue serving strained foods, depending on the child's general health and tooth development.
